Don't Waste Your Garden Workshop on April 28th

GREENVILLE – Have you noticed that in some growing seasons your garden produces too much food, making it nearly impossible for you to consume it all while it's still fresh? Has this ever happened to you? Have you left fruits and vegetables to rot in your garden because you cannot eat any more? If you have answered yes to any of these questions, then this workshop is for you.

Our goal with the “Don't Waste Your Garden” workshop is to help you learn how to preserve your food through freezing, instead of the traditional canning method. We also want to share with you how to regrow items in your garden. And finally, your garden's soil has many things it would like to tell you, are you listening? Learn about soil sampling and the important role it plays in the production of your garden. Attendees will be able to sample their garden at a reduced-rate through Darke SWCD, if interested.

Join us for this free workshop on Thursday, April 28, 2016 at the OSU Extension conference room located at 603 Wagner Avenue, Greenville, Ohio 45331 from 6:30-8:00 PM. If you are interested in attending the “Don't Waste Your Garden” workshop, call the Darke SWCD office at 937-548-1715, extension 3 to register. Or you can visit our website at www.darkeswcd.com and register online. Space is limited, so register now.
